VESTRY VOICES -Jeffrey Albright

Scott and I first started coming to Trinity regularly almost twenty years ago in December 2003. We knew then that Trinity was a community that was filled with love and acceptance. While many of the faces have changed since that time, both clergy and parishioners, the love and acceptance that first drew us into Trinity remains.

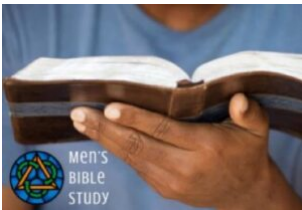

Trinity is a place where I can be my authentic self. I feel safe here, even at my most vulnerable times. Trinity truly is a unicorn when it comes to churches. I have been to many churches in my life, but I have never found a place like this one. We are a community of broken and blessed people. A community of beautiful human beings who embrace and cherish our imperfections. A community that holds each other up during both times of joy and times of struggle.
